Responsible Social Media Use Checklist (College Students)

✅ Do’s
- Think before posting – ensure your content is respectful and appropriate.
- Maintain a professional profile (use clear bio, decent profile picture).
- Fact-check information before sharing to avoid spreading misinformation.
- Respect others’ opinions and engage in constructive discussions.
- Adjust privacy settings to control who can see your content.

❌ Don’ts
- Don’t share offensive, abusive, or discriminatory content.

- Don’t post confidential or sensitive information (yours or others’).
- Don’t engage in online arguments or trolling.
- Don’t overshare personal life details that may harm your reputation.
- Don’t ignore digital footprint – remember posts can stay online permanently.

📝 Project Report (100–150 words)

A common example of poor digital communication causing problems is when a student posts inappropriate or offensive content on social media without considering its impact. For instance, there have been cases where internship offers were withdrawn after recruiters discovered unprofessional posts on a candidate’s profile. In such situations, the individual’s digital footprint directly affected their career opportunities. This could have been avoided by maintaining a professional online presence and thinking carefully before posting. Reviewing privacy settings and separating personal and professional content would also help. Additionally, understanding that employers often check social media profiles should encourage students to communicate responsibly online. Being mindful, respectful, and aware of long-term consequences is essential for effective digital communication.
